

For most of his working life, Mal has been engaged in developing companies, communities and public policy to harness the power of new technology. His career has focused in particular upon the competitive advantage to be achieved for companies and communities from the effective application of ICT. In the last 25 years Mal was a former Deputy Premier of Western Australia and has worked as a cabinet minister, company director, corporate manager and senior consultant.

Mal's lifetime involvement with the ICT Revolution and Innovation has lead him to be a regular Keynote Speaker and strategist in this field and was admitted as a Foundation Fellow of the Australian Institute of Company Directors in 1990.

In August 2012 Mal was awarded the Pearcey National Medal and admitted to the Australia ICT Industry Hall of Fame in recognition of a distinguished lifetime contribution to the development and growth of the Australian Information and Communications Technology Industry.
